

THE GAME OF LACROSSE.

A company of the Six Nation Indians of Canada, said to be the champions of the world, are soon to be here, to challenge the world to play Lacrosse. The tribes represented are Mohawks, Cayugas, Senecas, Oneidas, Onondagas and Tuskaroras. They will play the game of Lacrosse on the place where their forefathers encamped a century ago. The game will be very interesting and attract much attention. It might be well for the Centennial managers to employ young Bennett of the New York Herald, to play "polo" on the grounds. He would draw more attention than the Indians, and could display his athletic powers which may rival the Greeks in their Olympic games. At least, the managers might give the young man a chance.
